Think Cereals – Think ICC

Did you know...

The onset of cereals cultivation coincides with the start of human civilization.

There are over 15 different cereals and pseudocereals whereas wheat, maize and rice are the top 3 staple crops for over 4 billion people.

Around 50% of the world's daily caloric intake is based on cereal grain consumption.

Whole grain and high fibre grain-based foods are not only recommended in dietary guidelines worldwide but also provide added value for companies in the production chain from farm to fork.

The cereals industry is one of world's most important industries, with global production topping 2.5 billion tons, or more than 300 kg per person.

– A unique platform connecting cereal scientists and technologists around the world.
